

Why Commute When You Can

TELEWORK

It's "almost" easy using the online Telework Toolkit

The Kitsap Telework Pilot Project is looking for employees and employers to try telework (telecommuting) from January through April 2009.

Bremerton Telework Center

It's your office away from the office.
Free office space for teleworking
just four blocks from the ferry terminal.

Work From Home

If you've thought about teleworking,
this is a great opportunity to give it a test drive. Think of the time you'll save!

What is Telework?

Telework is a flexible work arrangement where an employee replaces the daily commute by working from home, a client's office, a telework center, or other approved location.

Most teleworkers work remotely one or two days a week. Some work remotely only occasionally or during emergencies.

Why Consider Telework?

Telework offers tangible benefits to employers and employees, in addition to the obvious environmental benefit of reduced carbon emissions and savings to taxpayers through less strain on area roads and infrastructure.

For EMPLOYERS:

- Improved productivity
- Improved employee recruitment & retention
- Possible savings on real estate and energy costs
- Applies toward State's commute-trip reduction goals
- Part of Disaster/Continuity of Operations Plan
- Continued operations during weather emergencies
- Healthier employees: sick employees don't have to come into the office / less stress
- Superior corporate citizenship - It's green!
- A more mobile, technologically savvy workforce

For EMPLOYEES:

- Improved morale
- Saving time and reduced stress when not commuting
- Greater schedule flexibility
- Feelings of recognition and trust by employer
- Reduced transportation costs

What's in the Toolkit?

The Toolkit is an online resource for both employers and employees. It guides employers through the process of setting up and running a telework program so they don't have to reinvent the wheel. It provides the information you need to make decisions about policies, technology, security and managing teleworkers.

It helps employees decide if they are right for telework and gives them the information they need to be successful.
